

education in Throop he worked for two years at the Price-Pancoast and Underwood Collieries. Again in 1902 he interrupted his studies at the University of Illinois to work for the Illinois Coal Co. in the Illinois Coal Co's Birdseye operation in Olyphant. Meanwhile he worked his way through Mansfield State Teacher's College and became a teacher in the Throop schools. He was principal of Jefferson School, Throop, and the former John Muto, now his wife, was on the faculty of that school.
