We wanted the Slet to stay in the minds of our people as an embodiment of those Sokol values for whose return some day the nation must again struggle.

Continued
from last issue -

Technically the Slet fulfilled this aim and numerically exceeded all previous events. It was a gathering saddened by the sorrow of parting. Its gymnastics were a prayer and an oath. But it did not fulfill the communist's expectations because the spontaneous demonstrations that accompanied it from the beginning and culminating in an inspiring parade, clearly demonstrated the nation's resistance to the regime. And it presented this aversion before the eyes of the entire diplomatic corps and the finest crop of world wide journalism.

In May, just before the Slet, the committee of the Czechoslovak Sokol Community made another effort to return to the original Czechoslovak Sokol structure and cancelled the action committees enforced into it during the push by the communists. (11) This created quite a storm but when the indispensable Sokol workers threatened to resign, the communists capitulated for the good of the Slet. After the Slet there was no further need for them or further restraint. The government presented a declaration to the ČOS executive committee and demanded their signatures on the declaration condemning demonstrations and asking for the expulsion of those responsible for such action. This declaration was intended to be a request for criminal prosecution of those involved. This document was accompanied by a listing of all "verified instigators", and actually contained names of individuals who were not even present at the Slet. When the directors refused both requests they were informed that the declaration had already been released to the press and that it would be published in the newspapers the following day together with the director's signatures.

It was clear that the Sokol had definitely ceased to be a democratic organization and had become a helpless tool of the communist regime. The Sokol members of the directorship, who were still the majority, voted for mass resignation of the entire executive committee, and when this was not adopted they resigned individually with the exception of three members. Then followed mass arrests and the expulsion of thousands of Sokols, whose positions were filled by known communists. After this the government thought that it finally had the Sokol in its hands, but again it was not so. The remaining membership, insofar as they did not step out, began passive resistance. This forced the government to abolish the Sokol organization even merely as a name.

Thus now during the one hundredth anniversary of its origin, there is no more Sokol in its country. The Sokol ideal is now being preserved only in the hearts of its faithful brothers and sisters. All there is in existence now are small branches still existing in the free world and the two American Sokol organizations. It is upon these to keep alive the Tyrs ideal, which gave the nation so much in the past and which it will need again in the future. For all eternity the following words by Tyrs will remain: "Only a Nation that is physically fit, spiritually developed and morally strong will be able to defend its right to live."

We were reminded repeatedly in this brief resume how Tyrš led his nation to freedom by persistent, unyielding affect upon the generations, by which he was able to transform the physical and moral habits of a nation. All the external success, the Slets, the legions, the liberation, were the results of the upbringing of the masses towards serving the nation. The basic symbol of this upbringing is the creation of a thinking, acting man, to whom democracy is not merely a motto, but a way of life. The Sokol does not suppress individuality, but on the contrary by uncovering and expanding personal abilities it creates strong individuals, uniting them by a common thought into a whole. It does not wipe off or overlook differences of economic levels, education, religion or political views; on the contrary it teaches the recognition of these differences, and the respect for everybody's conviction and his individual way of life; but it keeps reminding us that above this diversity, and the differences that may be dividing us there is one factor common to all... the nation and the country.

Consistent training for democracy marked the entire Sokol life. The most penetrating of course was emphasis by Tyrš upon regular, unceasing work in the Sokol gymnasias. There is where we learned to know each other, to evaluate and respect the abilities of others, to help and to subordinate, as well as to lead others. It was there that we learned that privilege and obligation are the heads and tails of the same coin and that leadership is both a responsibility and a duty to offer more than others.

Thus the results of this upbringing were evident in the entire Sokol life. From the very first meeting the conditions were in the hands of the working men as well as the spiritual cream of the nation. The Sokol's democratic spirit flowed over into the entire nation. If, as is known, Czechoslovakia was the recognized island of democracy that resisted the general influx of totalitarian ideas, this was to a great extent the result of Sokol upbringing.

This type of upbringing will always be needed by the nation. This is why it is urgent to maintain the basic concept of life as formulated by Tyrš. It is the duty of us who are free when the very kernel of the nation back in our old country is paralyzed by un-freedom. The Sokol idea is the most precious bloom of our self asserting Czechoslovak culture, and as such it must be given first consideration. It is not sufficient just to claim allegiance to it and to praise it verbally. It is essential to work for it, to guard it and to feed the roots that are safeguarding the future. We must attract the youth to take over from our hands and recruit the intelligentsia for the work, the commonplace everyday work from which it developed in the past, and which alone can guarantee its future. We dare not weaken in our minds because of the magnitude and distance of the goal ahead. Work, have faith and share your beliefs.

K 25 únoru 1948.

President republiky Dr. Beneš při svém tradičním štedrovečerním rozhlasovém proslovu v roce 1947 projevil zcela nezvyklý pesimismus a veliké starosti dokonce o samý základ celého našeho tradičního společenského života, presidentův projev působil velmi depresivně a zesílil obavy - rostla anarchie a zvláště proti platnému právnímu řádu. Nátlak komunistů prováděli rafinovaně a nastávající rok 1948 byl ve znamení nejistoty a obav, co bude a co je před námi. Demokratická oposice byla hnána podzemní politickou situací do úzkých a nestačila - nemohla stačit se ubránit, kdy komunisté ofenzivně vyhledávali záminky a příležitosti zastrašování, zatýkáním nekomunistů ve veřejné zprávě v různých krajích země. Není tedy divu, že do r. 1948 vstupovali političtí činitelé ve velkých starostech s nejistotou o tom, co jim přinese. Policejní teror který se stupňoval, nátlak odborů v továrnách a celkovou politickou situaci, který sloužil komunistům u nás, v Maďarsku a v Rumunsku. Celý měsíc leden až do poloviny února, kdy se dvanáct nekomunistických ministrů snažilo udržet ve vládě přes odpor komunistů. Ale komunisté nezhálehali - atentáty na demokratické ministry - ministerstvo vnitra začalo provádět zatýkání, nemocný Dr. Beneš byl jen ústavním presidentem a bránit se nemohl. 17 února v r. 1948 resignovalo dvanáct nekomunistických ministrů na protest proti "bezpečnostnímu" opatření komunistického člena vlády. Čeští komunisté, kteří byli "de facto" od roku 1945 vládci země, vypudili 25 února 1948 z vlády své lidové demokratické rozčarované rebelující kolegy a nastolili totalitní stát - diktaturu, která trvá ještě dnes.

A TIME FOR SHARING . . .

Since relocating to BEAUTIFUL Sonoma County, many heartwarming events have touched my life. As Ronald Coleman found his 'ShangriLa' in the movie "Lost Horizon", I too have found mine!

Annicka Chlupova, Bess Walkerova, and I recently visited Milada Jordakova at the Sebastopol Convalescent Home. Milada was soooo happy to see us and tears came to all of us. Tis such a sad fate to work hard all of our lives only to have to spend the twilight years 'out of touch with reality'. We shared our home-baked kolace and cookies with all the residents and upon leaving, I suggested we drive to Jordak's former property. I pulled into the driveway and as I started to get out of the car, Annicka exclaimed, "Oh don't get out - they might shoot us"! But living in America, I had no qualms about introducing myself to the lovely young lady who stepped out onto the front porch to see who was coming. Karel and Milada Jordak's cozy home was replaced by a rustic redwood structure. Upon hearing that we spent many lovely Sundays on this property with the Jordaks, she immediately invited us inside! During our brief visit, we discovered that Sally and her husband purchased the property last summer and have plans to restore the apple orchard. We were delighted to hold their one month old daughter and two year old son. Sally is a professional artist and . . . professional cook. Karel Jodak's castle still stands resulting in Sally sketching and naming her catering business after the castle! This is how it looks:

The 'Dibelka Sisters', Lillian and Blanche, recently spent a day with me and we had a ball investigating all kinds of shops. Lunch was great at Fiore's PUB and for 'old times sake', we drove to Occidental for an Italian chicken dinner at the old Union Hotel. We spent many a fun time there years ago when the Czechs took over the Russian River area each summer!!!! Oh memories! We 'parted company' upon returning to Sebastopol but Blanche had to stop for gas. Another surprise! The attendant turned out to be a former high school buddy of Blanche's son Mike!!! Mike had also introduced Jim to Karen and love bloomed so they were married! Karen also took many years of dance class from Lillian resulting in now owning her own dance studio in Sebastopol! The world is truly small, isn't it. Blanche had not seen this couple in years! And since Jim is a highway patrol officer, she certainly didn't expect to see him pumping gas! So it goes to show, if we but open our hearts, life can be beautiful! So how about sharing your 'happenings' with us too!

Raindrops Keep Fallin' on My Head - a familiar song to all of us - but not any more. A new Sokol Hall roof has been completed!!!

We're Sitting Pretty - Next time you sit at one of our tables during a dance or program, be sure to take note of the new lacy looking tableclothes we're featuring these days.

FIZZIER DRINKS - We certainly hope so, since the elimination of the soda dispensers, that frequently mal-functioned.

Bi-monthly Vestniks - Don't be upset with the mail (at least this time) if you didn't get an earlier publication of our vestnik. That's because we have gone to an every-other monthly publication. BUT we will continue to give you an equal amount of news and views.

Print, Print and Reprint - We have reprinted a Czech article by Jan Tichacek published in our last vestnik. We regret the many errors, and in the future, will try to avoid a similar occurrence. HOWEVER, we do not promise perfection. We are only human, and admit to making a mistake from time to time.

Czech Classes - We presently have six people interested in learning Czech, and will be calling a meeting of interested people along with our (we hope) instructor. Be sure to let us know if you care to join us. NOW IS THE TIME!!

RECENTLY DECEASED

Valentine's Day

- Make a dinner awash in romanticism - once a year (or maybe just this once) serve an all pink dinner. Some suggestions: cranberry apple juice beverages or pink champagne, crab or shrimp cocktail, ham gilded with cherries and served with cherry sauce, and strawberry bavarian cream for dessert. Decorate serving pieces with lavish amounts of frothy paper doilies.
- British tradition says that the first man an unmarried girl sees on Valentine's Day will be her husband, or he will resemble the man she will marry. In Denmark, Valentine cards are sent anonymously, signed with a dot for each letter in the sender's name.
- In the late 1800's in the U.S., "penny dreadfuls" were the Valentine cards in vogue. They were called penny dreadful because they were uniformly inexpensive ... and insulting! A common card read: "Mrs. Overdress: Your poor old husband slaves all day. To dress you in this silly way. But, worse and worse, each year you get, While he goes deeper into debt!"

ZA BRATREM VILEMEM BURŠÍKEM

Věčné kolo času dotáčí zase jeden rok. Dříve však než všechny události roku zapadnou do nenávratné minulosti a zapomnění, chtěl bych se pozastavit nad jednou, společnou a bolestnou ztrátou našeho drahého bratra Viléma Buršíka, kterého jsme byli zvyklí vídat v naší jednotě, kde byl hybnou pákou.

Je až neuvěřitelné, že již není mezi námi. Nechci psát o jeho zásluhách, tyto jsou nám dobře známe. Jak pomáhal uprchlíkům, jak dobrým byl, řečníkem a výborným redaktorem Sokolského Věstníku, nebo nekompromisním buditelem a bojovníkem za svobodu a demokracii naší okupované vlasti.

Chci se zmínit o jeho plánech - jak jsme a tom spolu hovořili. Jeho snem - kromě návratu do svobodné vlasti - bylo zařízení útulku - domova pro naše potřebné krajany, uprchlíky, lidi s malou pensí, neschopné práce, aby nemuseli žít a živořit osaměle někde v laciném, špinavém hotelu v Tenderloin Distriktu. Tato idea by se byla mohla uskutečnit společnou prací a pomocí.

Škoda, že se mezi námi našli lidé, kteří mu nerozuměli, nepochopili, že pod jeho zdánlivě tvrdší slupkou bylo měkké, teplé srdce, plné porozumění pro potíže ostatních.

Chvilky s ním byly nezapomenutelné, ať už při politických debatách, nebo když jsme při dobrém nápoji se bavili, zpívali a smáli při různých anekdotách a vzpomínkách. Bude nám tu hodně chybět.

Čest jeho památce!
